Fayette County's Pioneer Gone

Fayette County Loses Her Oldest Resident in The Death of Hiram E. Foster. A most interesting account of the life and death of Hiram E. Foster was published this week in the West Union Argo-Gazette as follows: Hiram E. Foster, 94, holder of many of the age records for West Union and Fayette county, died Friday afternoon at his home in the northwest part of the city. In feeble health for years, Mr. Foster failed rapidly the last two weeks of his life, so that his death was not unexpected. Mr. Foster was a widower. The home had been made for him for several years past by his daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Archer, in the northwest part of the city. Mr. Foster was at the time of his death the "oldest inhabitant" of Fayette county, having come here June 20, 1849, at an earlier date than any other person now residing in the county. He has held that honor since the death of Jacob Hoover, Dec. 24, 1930. Mr. Foster was the last surviving Civil war veteran in West Union, and by his death the Fayette county list is reduced to two—John T. Gager, Bethel township, and Franklin S. Downs, Auburn. So far as known here, Mr. Foster was the last surviving member of Company C, Sixth Iowa cavalry regiment. Mr. Foster also was the second oldest person residing in the city of West Union, Gottlieb Wendland being the only resident of greater age. Born Jan. 21, 1842, in LaPorte county, Indiana, Mr. Foster as a boy of seven years came from Evansville, Wis., to West Union on June 20, 1849, with his parents, when there was only one log shanty on the present site of this city. Whose shanty that was he could not remember. His father, J. W. Foster, was the first school fund commissioner of Fayette county, locating the sections of land set aside for the government as an endowment for educational purposes. The J. W. Foster family located on a farm northwest of West Union, residing on the site of the old stone house on the place now owned by Representative George L. Scott. A year later they came to a location south of the West Union cemetery and resided there until after the Civil war. Following his army service, Mr. Foster resided in West Union for a time, working as brick and stone mason in the open season and as harness-maker in the winters. Later he lived many years on a farm in Dover township. In 1905 he moved to Clermont and lived there until 1913, when he returned to West Union to spend his remaining years. He has never had a home more than ten miles away from the spot to which he first came in Fayette county. Mr. Foster was married May 13, 1880, to Miss Ellen Learn, their married life continuing for almost forty-eight years until her death Jan. 9, 1928. Besides his adopted daughter, six nieces and a nephew survive. He held membership in the Methodist church from 1885 until his death, and was a very regular attendant until his hearing failed in his advanced age. His enlistment in Company C, sixth Iowa cavalry, was made in West Union Sept. 22, 1862, when he was twenty years old. He hoped to be sent south, where four brothers already were serving in the Union army, but the regiment

Von Honors In 4-H Club Work

Dean Platt and Joseph Hall Represent Fayette County At State Fair. Dean Platt and Joseph Hall on first honors last Wednesday among all other 4-H club demonstration teams in Fayette County, at the Iowa State Fair where they will give the same demonstration in competition with other teams chosen from the various counties of the entire state. Their demonstration was on the construction and operation of a safety bull pen. The county agent of Chickasaw county acted as judge of these teams. On Saturday of this week both Dean and Joe will motor to Ames here they will compete for positions on the general livestock judging team of Fayette county club for several years and have one some splendid work. Last year they gave a demonstration on the production of quality milk which placed second at the Dairy Cattle Congress and fourth at the state fair. We hope that this experience will prove profitable for them and help them get first honors at both of these places this year. A GOOD FISH STORY. Of all the powerful fish yarns that have come to our attention in this season, the palm goes to the Pettinger brothers, Leo and Frank, for an incident in which they were the central figures on the Maquoketa at Delhi last week Thursday evening. Frank, home on his vacation from Davenport, was enjoying an evening of fishing with his brother Leo of this city. The two men had enjoyed good success and when darkness came started paddling their canoe back up the stream to the Harticks bridge. Frank was at the stern while Leo sat at the bow of the boat with one of his arms hanging over the side. Around his wrist was a strap watch. It must have been the reflection of the moon striking the shiny watch that attracted the attention of the fish, for suddenly a large bass lurled himself at Leo's arm. Frightened when the object struck, Leo naturally raised his arm in the air and quick as lightning the bass "struck again," missed the praiseworthy arm and landed squarely in the bottom of the canoe where he flopped wildly about until the boys got him conraled. He was a beauty—measuring nearly eighteen inches, and a mighty fine catch to show to the boys back here in the village. (Suggestion to advertising department—See Jewellers about conducting special August clearance sale on wrist watches—No fisherman should be without one).—Dyersville Commercial. -WEST-AD-ORNG Results.
