(k) Jonathan Harrison was the grandson of Timothy Harrison (born about 1720; died May, 1788; buried May 16 at Elizabeth) and Elizabeth Meeker (?) his wife (died August, 1793; buried August 5, at Elizabeth). Timothy Harrison was probably of the Orange branch of the Newark, N. J., Harrisons, descendants of the original Harrison settler of Newark, Sergeant Richard Harrison, who came from Branford, Conn., and had emigrated from West Kirby, Cheshire, England. Timothy's sons, Stephen, Matthew and Abraham, served in the Revolution as privates. Abraham is buried at Lyon's Farms, N. J. Stephen Harrison (born 1743; died December 22, 1793), father of the above-named Jonathan Harrison, is buried in the Presbyterian churchyard at Elizabeth, N. J., his tomb being marked by the bronze marker of the Sons of the American Revolution. He married Abigail, daughter of Job Mulford (a descendant of Lieutenant Lion Gardiner, the valiant colonial soldier who commanded Saybrook Fort in the Pequot War, and also of the famous Mulford family of Devonshire, England.) She was an active and patriotic woman, and is said to have baked bread gratuitously twice daily for the patriot militia, and to have picked up a cannon ball which fell near her upon her father's farm at the battle of Springfield. Rachel Wade appears as Lockey Rachel Wade in the church records at Union. The compiler is indebted to his friend and client, William Elliott Harrison, Esq., of Fort Madison, Iowa, son of Enos Hampton Harrison (No. 1512), for this resumé of his careful and prolonged researches into the Harrison ancestry.
