SCOTLAND RESEARCH WIKI

To get to the Scotland section of the Research Wiki, simply type “Scotland” in the search box and click “GO.” The page “Scotland Genealogy” will appear.

On the right side of the screen, you will see “Beginning Research” under the Scottish flag. Three links here, “Guided Research,” “Research Strategies,” and “Record Finder,” can help you decide which records will give you the types of information you need.

Under “Record Types,” you will find links to articles on records of value for family history.

Under “Scotland Background,” you will find links to articles that may assist you as you use the records—articles on history, handwriting, and names.

The links under “Local Research Resources” will direct you to locations like archives and societies in Scotland that may also aid you in your search for your Scottish ancestors.

In the middle section of the Scotland Genealogy page you will find two buttons, one for “Scotland Online Records” and another for “Ask the Community.” The Online Records button takes you to a list of records online regarding all or most of Scotland. “Ask the Community” is a great way to get help when you are not at the Family History Library. Join the “Scotland Genealogy Research” community and post your questions to the group. All members of that community can see your question and answer if they have anything that may help.

Under those buttons are links and other advice for getting started in Scottish research.

If you have knowledge that you would like to share on the Research Wiki, click the “Submit Wiki Content” link on the left, and fill out the form. Your information will be reviewed and if deemed relevant and appropriate, will be added to the Wiki. Examples of the type of information we’re looking for include:

- Link to a genealogical society or library for a county
- New online database containing genealogical information
- List of resources found in an archive or library
- Updating inaccurate historical or geographical information

For all submissions, please check the corresponding Wiki page to see if the information is already listed.
